

and of the proper Soils, &c. 123 than five Shillings for Ale and Eighteenpence per Barrel for small Beer.

C H A P. XXI.

A Philosophical Account for Brewing strong October Beer. By an Ingenious Hand.

IN Brewing, your Malt ought to be sound and good, and after its making to lye two or more Months in the Heap, to come to such a temper, that the Kernel may readily melt in the washing.

The well dressing your Malt, ought to be one chief Care; for unless it be freed from the Tails and Dust, your Drink will not be fine and mellow as when it is clean dressed.

The grinding also must be considered according to the high or low drying of the Malt; for if high dryed, then a gross grinding is best, otherwise a smaller may be done; for the Care in grinding consists herein, lest too much of the Husk being ground small should mix with the Liquor which makes a gross Feces, and confe-