Le bas Iusticier; ou, le Seigneur bas Iusticier. One that hath base Jurisdiction (within a certaine Precinct) over his owne, or another mans, tenants; takes notice of reall, or personall Actions not exceeding the value of 60 s. or wherein a greater amercement, or fine then 7 s. 6 d. Tourn. lies not: With trespassses a few Customes (as the reformed ones of Paris, and Melcun) allow him to deale, so they deserue not a greater fine then that; but the most restraine him to personall matters, and those especially that concerne his own rights; (with which onely the Bas Iusticiers of old time used to meddle; howsoeuer, their Iudges not content withall, haue in proceffe of time incroached on causes bred in villages betweene partie and partie, touching securities, boundaries, delinerie of possession, harme done by trespasssing beasts, and other sleight and petty differences, that require a speedie, and local decision; for all which they are to keepe but foure Courts in a yeare:) Criminall persons taken in the manner he must apprehend, and may keepe them in his prison foure and twentie houres; but not longer, nor can he proceed further against them: Upon euerie Confiscation, Escheat, or Bien Vacant that falls within his Libertie hee may take 7 s. 6 d. Tourn. but they are so few, and that so little, as many Iusticiers neglect it.

Le haut Iusticier; ou, le Seigneur haut Iusticier. A Lord of high Jurisdiction; iudges, and determines all ciuile, and criminall causes (except, as in la haute Iustice) happening within his Libertie, or Precinct; To which end hee keepe a Iudge, or Garde de Iustice, at this time siled higher (son Bailly, & Lieutenant,) who must bee learned, and a Graduate (for a Iudge thats no Graduate is not, in France, held worthy to pronounce the sentence of death in an ordinarie Jurisdiction:) And because of his owne busineses determinable (if they concerne the rights of his Jurisdiction, or Seignourie) in his owne Court, he also keepe a Procureur fiscal, by the name, and mouth of whom he pleads, euen as the King doth in higher Courts by his. He may hunt freely in fit seasons, ouer all the enclosed groundes of his Liberties: Hee may fine his (offending) vassalls at his pleasure; and once in his time cause them all sweare, to acknowledge no other Iurisdiction then his; to preserve, by all possible means, the priviledges thereof; and to informe him of any that shall offer to inroach upon them: He leuies to his owne use all fines, and confiscations (except for high treason) all Escheats (except bastards, & strangers goods) and all Biens Vacans (except some kind of wrecks) accruing within his Precincts: In Normandie he cannot keepe malefactors in his prison about 24 houes; after which (if he haue not the wisest condemned them) he must send them vnto the next Supreme Lord; In other Prouinces he may keepe them longer, and euery where punish, according to the customes of the countrey, all sorts of them (euē to Sorcerers, Blasphemers, & Idolaters.) Only he refers ouer to the kings officers, and Courts, all such as commit, or be charged with, high treason.

Le Moyen Iusticier. The Lord of meane, or middle Iurisdiction; takes notice of all ciuile causes as well as the Haut Iusticier (except in the ordering of the separation of goods betwene married folkes; the interdiction of wnterfests; & les Decrets; wherein he comes as far short of him, as he goes beyond the Bas Iusticier en le seellé, confection d' inventaire, emancipation, dation de tuteurs & curateurs, wherewith the Bas Iusticier is not to deale:) But what criminall causes hee may take notice of is not agreed on by the customes of France; for some of them, as those of Paris, Nivernois, and others, assigne him none but such as are not finable about 60 s. (but most he can impose in any cause:) Others giue him power ouer Batteries, Blood-wipes, and sleight felonies; Others ouer Manslaughters, and capitall felonies: But others (the neereſt vnto the Common Law of France) permit him to iudge no offenders but such as are to escape with life, & limme; And therefore his Iudge needs not be a Graduate: Nor hath he (as the Haut Iusticier) a Procureur fiscal (though he haue an Officer of almost the same nature, tearmed Procureur d' Office) because he hath no fiſque, but onely an allowance of 60 s. Tour. out of euery Confiscation, Escheat, or Bien vacant, thats leuied, or gotten, in his Precinct.
